Mockups

A wireframe of a mobile application screen. At the top is a header bar with a close button (X) on the left and three horizontal lines (menu) on the right. Below the header is a large, dark gray, irregularly shaped area containing the word "Heading". To the right of this shape are three smaller, circular gray shapes of varying sizes. Below the main content area is a text block with placeholder text: "Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit. Nulla quam velit, vulputate eu pharetra nec, mattis ac neque. Duis vulputate commodo lectus, ac blandit elit tincidunt id. Sed rhoncus, tortor sed eleifend tristique, tortor mauris molestie elit, et lacinia". At the bottom of the screen is a button labeled "Button".

How it Started

The Florida "Mountains"

In the spring of 2006, on a road trip from Miami to Orlando, I passed by high hills soaring above my head. I didn't think it was possible, since Florida is one of the flattest states in the country.

It turns out that hill was the Miami landfill, otherwise known as "Mount Trashmore." I couldn't believe one city would create so much waste, let alone the entire state.

Energy is an extremely useful asset in the modern society, but over 50% of that energy is actually wasted. Resource depletion and excessive waste production occurs every second of our lives, and something must be done to stop the potential consequences at hand.

It was then I created Teens Go Green, a non-profit organization that raises awareness on protecting our environment by following the four R's: Reduce, Reuse, Recycle, and our very own R which stands for Respect.

Teens Go Green has become something larger than I would have ever imagined. Stay tuned on our website to check out all the latest updates and newest upcoming projects. There are many exciting things to come!

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Tran
Founder of Teens Go Green

DONATE

I started to recycle at home, and took small actions everyday to live a greener lifestyle. I unplugged any electronics I saw that were not being used, timed my showers, and even collected trash to make eco-outfits. My parents weren't very supportive of my choices, so I had to show them the significance of what I was doing.

I wanted to take part in environmental projects in my community, but many of them turned me down because I was twelve years old at that time. I decided to take matters to do something about it.
